FINDS WIFE ON DEATH BED

Husband Left Many Years Ago Offering to Return When Called Upon.

SEPARATION UNEXPLAINED

Man Was True to His First Love and Comes Back When Asked.

"If you ever want me, open this envelope and send to the address contained therein. I will come to you at any time." Nearly a quarter of a century ago Philadelphian named McNamara left wife and family with this parting injunction, a separation having been arranged by mu

Origin of Trouble Unknown.

Origin of Trouble Unknown.
What differences arose to part this man from his wife are not known. From the oridence obtainable it seems probable that small differences, petty, jars, in which false pride prevented either from yielding, gradually accumulated until they formed a barrier strong enough and high enough to separate the husband from his wife, the father from his children.
The two little daughters were left with the wife. Alene the man went to St. Louis and took up the broken threads of his life.

Opened the Envelope.

When her physicians declared that her malady had reached a dangerous stage, and she must be removed to the hospital, if she were to have even a slight chance of prolonging her existence, the last vestige of her pride was swept away, and in trembling tones she asked that the envelope left by her husband be brought to her. It had been carefully preserved whrough all the days of his absence.

She opened it and a summons was quickly sent to the address it contained. In all the years of his lonely life the husband had remained true to his love essary delay he was speeding as fast as steam could carry him to her bedside.

The meeting of husband and wife, the tears of mingled joy at reunion and sorrow for the wasted years cannot be described. The scene that was enacted in that little hospital room was too sacred fer the eyes of outsiders.

The years of surrow and separation were repaid with any a few hours of mutual companionship, but those hours were filled with a happiness-that not even the dark cloud of death could entirely overshadow, and when the wife breathed her last, it was with her head pillowed on a husband's breast and her eyes looking a tender farewell into eyes that responded in kind through streaming tears.

It was decided that there was no reason to change the name she had assumed, and even in death she is unknown by the name she took at the altar. Her grave, in West Laurel Hill Cemptery, is said to be visited daily by the heart-broken husband.—Philadelphia North American.

Small Ads Pay.

It does not follow that small ads, stand for little concerns, or that a beggarly compensation is the result derived; for many a large business is conducted by these little trade promoters, and they return thousands of dollars annually,

Business men of brains and experience are aware of their utility, use them as much as possible, and are observant of their offerings; they do not neglect to scrutinize them for possibilities and information.

There are many commercial men of prominence who can look back and see what a strong part the little ads. played in contributing to their advancement.

The best small advertising in Virginia is the Tee-Dee Want Ads. Give them a trial and you will be convinced.
